Location

Seville is the artistic, cultural, and financial capital of southern Spain, irrigated by the river Guadalquivir. It is the capital of Andalusia and of the province of Sevilla and ranks as the fourth-largest metropolitan area of Spain. The city sits well inland, but a mere 6 meters above sea level.

Andalusia was occupied by Moors for about 800 years but Seville was a cultural center long before. The fertility of the land and its climate with mild winters and about 3000 hours of sun per year (in August temperatures can reach 47°C) made Phoenicians and Carthaginians settle here. Later came the Romans, and two of its emperors, Trajan and Hadrian, in fact were born here. Seville was long an important sea port, prior to the silting up of the Guadalquivir. Today the city is an important conference and business centre for southern Spain.

Academic Calendar

Courses Available

Students will study at the University of Seville either for the full academic year (from the last week of September to the following July and middle of September, if necessary, for exams) or for one semester, followed or preceded by a work placement. They will follow modules in English or Spanish depending on your degree requirements, from the undergraduate programme of the Escuela Universitaria de Estudios Empresariales at the University of Seville. They will study the equivalent of 30 ECTS credits per semester.

The Institute of Foreign Languages offer free Spanish courses to students holding Erasmus grants. There are courses on four different levels.
